NO COMPLAINT TO OFFICERS.

Nothing Reported Officially About Selling Diseased Meat.

Brattleboro, Aug. 20.—Atty. Gen. Clarke C. Fitts was interviewed Saturday relative to the charge which is being made by P. W. Clement and his campaign managers, supported by all-davits, that diseased beef is being, or has been, sold by the state of Vermont. Mr. Fitts said that none of the persons publishing the charge had ever made complaint about the matter to the prosecuting officers, but that the matter was brought to his attention Tuesday through a newspaper report.

Mr. Fitts said: "I immediately called the matter to the attention of the state attorney of Chittenden county, and directed him to make a thorough investigation and report to me. That investigation is now going on. The charge will be run to the ground, and if it appears that anybody has been selling diseased meat he will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law."

"Persons who know of such a crime being committed owe it to the state to report to the prosecuting officers at once, for in no other way can our penal laws be enforced."

When asked if he had received a report from the state attorney, Atty. Gen. Fitts replied that he had received a partial report. He would not say what the nature of it was, but he did not appear to be at all disturbed about it. "When I receive the complete report," he said, "I will give it out for publication."

JAPAN.

Japan professes to have learned many valuable lessons from this country, but she certainly has never been taught by the United States government to extend a warm welcome with one hand and bar the door with the other.—Portland Advertiser.

There is no reason to believe that Japan will manifest a notably unselfish character in any matter closely affecting both its commercial and its political interests. It did not willingly surrender its hope of territorial aggrandizement in Manchuria, and it may yet nullify the Portsmouth treaty by refusing to comply with all its provisions.—Denver Republican.

SHOT HIS GIRL'S UNCLE

Judge Emery of Seattle, Had Forbidden Youth's Visits

HE WAS INSANELY JEALOUS

Boy Went to Sweetheart's House Against Orders, Killed Her Guardian and Barricaded Himself in a Bedroom.

Chester Thompson, nineteen years old, shot and killed Judge George Meade Emery, one of Seattle's most prominent lawyers and a member of a Maryland family. Thompson is the son of William H. Thompson, formerly counsel for the Great Northern railway, and a nephew of Maurice Thompson, the poet and author.

Young Thompson's attentions were distasteful to Miss Charlotte Whit-

Thompson whipped out a revolver. Emery, a beautiful piece of Judge Emery, seventeen years old, and it is said she had asked her uncle to forbid the house to her suitor, who is insanely jealous of her. Thompson telephoned asking if Miss Whittlesey was at home. Judge Emery answered that she was not and added that Thompson would not be welcome there.

Roon the young man, without a hat or coat, rang the front door bell. Judge Emery answered it.

"I want to see Charlotte," cried the visitor, making as if to enter.

"She is not here; you cannot see her," said the judge, extending his arm to bar Thompson's entrance.

Thompson whipped out a revolver.

The first shot struck Judge Emery in the hip, the second pierced his left lung, the third wounded Mrs. Keith, who was visiting the Emerys. As Judge Emery fell Thompson sprang over his body and ran upstairs, searching for Miss Whittlesey, who, in truth, was not at home.

But the desperate Thompson found the Clare and Tom Emery, the judge's children, three and four years old. He took them in a bedroom, pushed the bedstead against the door and when the police demanded his surrender held them at bay for several hours by threatening to kill both children if an attempt was made to take him. Finally Thompson's father arrived and persuaded him to give himself up.

Thompson went to kill Miss Whittlesey. It is believed, for she rejected his proposal of marriage recently. He swears he meant only to kill himself if she repulsed him again. He says he knows she loves him, but is influenced by her uncle against him. Thompson declares Judge Emery was about to strike him and he shot in self defense.

Boy Steals Baby Lions.

The mystery surrounding the theft of two baby lions from the kindergarten at Paragon park, Boston, was cleared away when a member of the summer colony at Point Allerton called at the park and confessed that his twelve-year-old son, who had become imbued with the idea that he must become a lion tamer, had stolen the animals and kept them unknown to his parents in a shed. When one of the lions died as a result of being overfed, he confessed the theft to his mother. The father offered to reimburse the kindergarten for any reasonable amount on consideration that his son should not be prosecuted. He paid $175.

Hypnotized by Barber's Razor.

John P. Wilson, a customer of Heber McGrath, a Danville (Ky.) barber, fell from the chair apparently dead just as the razor touched his face. On being revived Wilson acknowledged that cold steel touching him suddenly exercised a hypnotic effect. He said that when he was a boy he started barefoot across a railroad track and fell as if paralyzed. A tramp rescued him from an approaching express train. At his own request he was strapped to the chair and shaved.

A sort of wafer made from a resinous juice and used by the natives in the Malay peninsula is the smallest coin in actual circulation. It has a value of one ten-thousandth of a cent.

RENOVATED BUTTER.

Marked Improvement in Its Quality, and Demand For It Increasing.
By LEVI WELLS, dairy inspector, bureau of animal industry.

The law as applied to renovated butter requires rigid and frequent inspection to be made of the plants where it is manufactured and of the materials used in its composition as well as the sanitary conditions within and without the factories, including proper drainage, ventilation, etc., so that nothing unwholesome or detrimental to health shall exist in the finished product when it leaves the factory.

At the present time many creameries who consider their product gilded edged could with profit, so far as cleanliness and sanitary conditions are concerned, advantageously examine and adopt methods practiced in some of the best renovating plants.

But the marked improvement in the quality of renovated butter is only partially due to the improved conditions of recent years. The most important factor in this improvement is in securing the packing stock while it is fresh and giving it proper care until it is needed for use, so that instead of lying around in the basements of country stores absorbing the odors of fish and kerosene oil it is put in cold storage at a temperature below zero, where it remains, without deteriorating in quality, until it is needed to make over. Manufacturers generally have abandoned the idea that they can produce a merchantable article of butter from old rancid stock, and, as a rule, if any such is received they reject it. Some of it goes to the cheap bakeries and the rest is used for soap grease.

Lack of Packing Stock.

The markets, both here and abroad, seem to take readily at remunerative prices all the better grades of renovated butter that can be produced, and the quantity is only limited by the amount of packing stock the country provides. The business, as far as the quantity is concerned, has undoubtedly reached its limit, not from lack of profit in manufacturing or of demand for the finished product, but from lack of material from which to make the goods.

The amount of packing stock to be produced each year will gradually decline, principally because it will be diverted into more profitable channels by improved methods and the introduction of hand separators.

Rich Soil For Tobacco.

Tobacco is a crop which usually pays well for a large outlay in fertilizers, other conditions being favorable. Farmers not familiar with the methods practiced in the Connecticut valley are greatly surprised when told that it is the custom with many of the best farmers in that locality to apply every year to the same field from $50 to $70 worth of fertilizer per acre. These growers expect and annually harvest in the neighborhood of a ton of barn cured tobacco to the acre. Furthermore, the quality of the leaf produced is better now than it was twenty-five years ago, when much less intensive methods of culture and fertilization were used. The writers well understand that the expert and plug wrapper types of tobacco produced in Virginia are vastly different from the cigar wrapper and binder types produced in the Connecticut valley. They believe, however, that the efficiency of rich land is the same for both sections.—McNess and Matthewson.

Low Down Wagon.

The low down wagon is gaining in popularity. The one I obtained seven years ago was the first one introduced in my neighborhood, and now there are several. The wheels of mine are twenty-four inches high, with six inch tires. The short turning feature of the low down is something to be commended. In hauling and turning among the stumps of new ground and in the narrow lanes, small feed or barn yards, etc., this feature is very desirable.—Michigan Farmer.

NEWS AND NOTES

During the calendar year 1905 tobacco to the value of $2,281,703 was exported from the Philippine Islands. Spain was the largest taker of leaf tobacco, Hongkong of cigars and cigarettes.

A great problem with western grain farmers is to get sacks for this year's crop. This has always been difficult. This year $2,000,000 worth of the goods went up in smoke in San Francisco, remarks an exchange.

Midsummer jobs include digging ditches, laying tile and cleaning out and deepening wells when necessary. For many purposes fire killed timber should be preferred to green timber because it is so well seasoned, according to the national forest service. It is more desirable than green timber and also lighter, which lessens the cost of transportation.

That the hay crop of the United States may prove disappointing is the opinion of Orange Judd Farmer, based upon the view that weather conditions throughout the country have not been at all conducive to a large yield of hay of good quality.

The man who invented the "vineless potato," which guileless people were urged to grow in bins in their cellars by means of a secret compound (to be obtained at $4.50 a package), has met with discouragement. According to press reports, the postal authorities have issued a fraud order denying the vineless business the use of the mails and chemists of the department of agriculture are credited with unkindly calling the marvelous compound "nothing but a low grade of sulphate of potash."

Origin of the Barbed Arrow.

The barbed arrow doubtless had its origin in the observation of different kinds of thorns. Many thorns have natural barbs which render them both inconvenient and dangerous to travelers.
